

Sartoria Ripense

Near the piazza del popolo is Sartoria Ripense, a small, cluttered, utterly charming men's-tailoring establishment run by Andrea Luparelli. He employs 10 tailors who specialize in suits with clean lines and little or no canvas lining. "A jacket is supposed to fit like a jacket; a shirt is supposed to fit like a shirt," he [...]

By DAVID COGGINS

Sartoria Ripense

Sartoria Ripense tailors at work

Near the piazza del popolo is Sartoria Ripense, a small, cluttered, utterly charming men's-tailoring establishment run by Andrea Luparelli. He employs 10 tailors who specialize in suits with clean lines and little or no canvas lining. "A jacket is supposed to fit like a jacket; a shirt is supposed to fit like a shirt," he says with a friendly jab at his Neapolitan colleagues, who prize the shirtlike fit and comfort of their coats.

Specialty: Unlined and summer-weight suits.

Andrea Luparelli